DAN-YR-OGOF: BATTLE OF BRITAIN SERIES

by Dig Hastilow

The 2nd December 1990 saw three MCG members, Nick Geh, Brian Murlis and Dig Hastilow kitting up in the Dan-Yr-Ogof car park for a venture into DYD's latest extension, the Battle of Britain series. Nick had discovered the new cave on the weekend of the 50th anniversary of the Battle of Britain (and the Cave Diving Group camp) when he dived upstream into the resurgence sump. Although this had been dived before to an "airbell" many years ago, Nick thought it worth another look. A distinct lack of enthusiasm from the other CDG members at the camp saw Nick making a solo effort. When he surfaced in the airbell, he was greeted by a distant rumble of flowing water, and a tricky 15ft climb led him into the new cave. When he reported his find back to the CDG members, he had far more enthusiasm for his next trip...!!

To say that Dan-Yr-Ogof holds a lot of potential is emphasised when you realise that all this was discovered 5 minutes walking/caving from the carpark!!

So the motley trio scabbled down into the resurgence river and into the cave past the rope leading up to the show cave, and on to a keyhole duck underwater to the resurgence sump. Nick led through with the standard Welsh 4ft viz, surfacing in the airbell followed by Brian then Dig. The 15ft climb is now made easier with a handline as well as a hauling line for pulling up fins, line reels etc. Brian and Nick travelling "lightweight" zipped up the climb, and de-kitted while Dig, carrying larger tanks (for a dive further in the series), struggled up. He then had to negotiate the following hands and knees crawl with clanking tanks and hoses, straps and harnesses catching on seemingly every possible projection of the razor sharp rock. (Unlike more visited caves the rock formations are often wafer thin as the passing of cavers has yet to take it's toll on the more fragile examples).

The crawl ends at an 8ft drop and towards you thunders the river along a deep canal and disappears down a cascade to the left and soon becomes a high-speed sump. (Not a winter project!!) A quick crawl up to the straw chamber to the right to collect the digging tools, and the three waded of into the canal looking for ledges to stand on, but soon had to swim from ledge to ledge, and they always seem to hit you in the shin! Head room varies from 3ft to about 1ft, and it won't take much water for this section to sump off.

After 150ft, a final duck through an arch and the curtain of a waterfall leads into the impressive Glyn Saunder's Hall. This 70ft high chamber is mainly taken up by a lake, with a tributary stream cascading in from 60ft up one wall. The lake is connected underwater to another lake, "Lake Zero" which can be reached by scrambling over a scree bank. Lake Zero is 360ft downstream from the previous end of the river at Lake 1, but the two have been linked since the discovery of the Battle of Britain series by Nick and Martin Farr.

Dig's task for this trip was to line and survry another sump, which he dived for the first time on the previous trip, and found that it connected with the "main" (ie Lake 1/Lake Zero) sump. While he was doing this, Brian was seeing how far he could free climb up the waterfall towards the enticing and as yet unentered hole through which the stream plunged. He managed an impressive 30ft or so, but an increasingly vertical climb and dodgy rock prevented any further progress.

Dig had in the meantime laid 65ft of line and conducted an exploration of the walls and roof of the sump, with the only lead being back under the floor of Glyn Saunder's Hall, but this was a rather committing squeeze for the amount of kit he was wearing.

The next job was the dig. At the far end of the Chamber is a large blockage, which is apparently filling a huge passage heading north, but it is hoped that this is only a cone of debris. The obvious point to tackle the dig was at the top right hand side where the spoil doesn't quite reach the roof, leaving an enticing airspace... Digging is easy here with small quantities of medium sized boulders, light sandy spoil, and unlimited dumping space (a few more like this on Mendip please!) Three hours was spent hacking away and good progress made before time ran short and an exit was made from this impressive section of cave after a memorable and productive trip.

++++ MCG 1991 MEETS PROGRAMME +++++ BANK HOLIDAY WEEKENDS IN ITALICS +++++

As you will have noticed, there has not been a meets programme published yet, either in the newsletter or on your new membership cards. As the response for leaders for specific caves/dates was so poor, especially for those later on in the year, it was decided to publish the meets and leaders as an on-going programme throughout the year.

CONGRATULATIONS . . .

...to Alan and Liz Mellon on the birth of their daughter, Cathryn...

...also to Ian and Linda Parry who tied the knot (at last!) in Bangkok while touring in Thailand over Christmas.

THANKS . . .

...to everyone who rejoined the Group and sent in their subs so promptly. At 31st January, 93 members had rejoined, 44 of those were before Christmas. 69 of these have opted to pay cottage fees and 24 have purchased season tickets. If you have not yet paid please forward your subs ASAP or return your cottage key to Martin Rowe.

NEW RESCUE WARDEN

Brian Murlis has taken over from Vince Simmonds as MCG rescue warden. As he is also cottage warden, he knows who helps clean and maintain the cottage. Remember this if you need to be rescued! On a more serious note, he will be updating the MCG rescue kit and arranging a rescue practise in the near future.

EXPEDITIONS ABROAD

As an alternative to the trip to Czechoslovakia, organised by Dave Tooke, there will also be a gentler "caving holiday" to France. The intention is to return to Reseau Felix Trombe, near Arbas in the Haute Garonne, visited by MCG in 1983. We will be departing from Portsmouth on Friday 19th July and returning via Caen on Saturday 3rd August. Accommodation will be either camping or a basic "hut" in Arbas. The idea is to have a fun time, mixing both SRT and non-SRT caving with walking in the Haute Garonne, so that cavers and non-cavers alike can have an enjoyable holiday. Further details from Martin and Yvonne Rowe on 0252-872006.

COTTAGE DOINGS . . .

...does anyone have a vacuum cleaner they can donate to the cottage? If so, let Brian Murlis know...

...before we "contract out" the work, is anyone prepared to help install handbasins in the guest room? Again, contact Brian...

...and finally, a reminder of the cottage work weekend (with barrel) on 4/5th May. The cottage is now ten years old and is beginning to show signs of wear and tear. There are many simple tasks which need to be done without requiring any special skills. Please do your bit by turning up to help Brian with the work (and the barrel - he'll get very drunk if he has to finish it alone!).

FOUND . . .

...an FX2 headpiece (about 4 months ago). If you think it's yours then phone Malcolm Cotter and describe it!

LOST — A HOLE IN THE GROUND!

by Tony Knibbs

The winter of 1963 was outstanding for its heavy snowfall. On Mendip enough snow fell to produce a drift of some 20ft at Kingdown Farm and somewhat lesser but equally road-blocking depths elsewhere. Being then based at the Group's original cottage down at Nether Wood, our weekends on Mendip were transformed into something between a fight for survival and the pursuit of silly games in the snow which still persisted around the cottage up to the end of March.

A favourite pastime was to walk over interesting areas to see if we could find blowholes caused by warm air from a cave "breathing" a hole through overlying snow. One such walk took us over the mined rakes to the southeast of Bleak House from Velvet Bottom and, in the lightly disturbed level area extending from the southern edge of the major entrenchment, we duly found such a blowhole.

It was about 30cm in diameter and formed through about half a metre of snow laying in a shallow uneven trench. It took Geoff Davies and myself an hour or so to widen the snowhole, pull out a plug of rocks and assorted bits of ironwork and expose a draughting entrance to a pitch.

We returned later with a couple of crowbars for belays and an optimistic amount of ladder. With Geoff lifelining I went down first, passing a couple of metres of walled shaft of about a metre in diameter before the shaft widened and became freehanging. I stepped off the ladder into something unusual - the carcass of a cow (one of three, I think). I attempted a few acrobatics trying to avoid wading through dead cows but only partially succeeded, at least the state of decomposition had passed the pungent stage!

Anyway there was darkness in two opposite directions from the foot of the ladder and I soon forgot the soft landing as I followed the very obvious draught for a few metres to where it seemed to be emitted from a muddy, boulder-filled hollow in the floor. The evidently mined rift closed down at this point, so I returned to the ladder and set off in the opposite direction, crawling under jammed boulders. I passed a short gravel-floored side passage to the right, crawled under more boulders and stood up in a rift about 5 or 6m high which continued forwards above my head. The continuation was only accessible by climbing a rather unstable boulder wall which I decided to leave for next time.

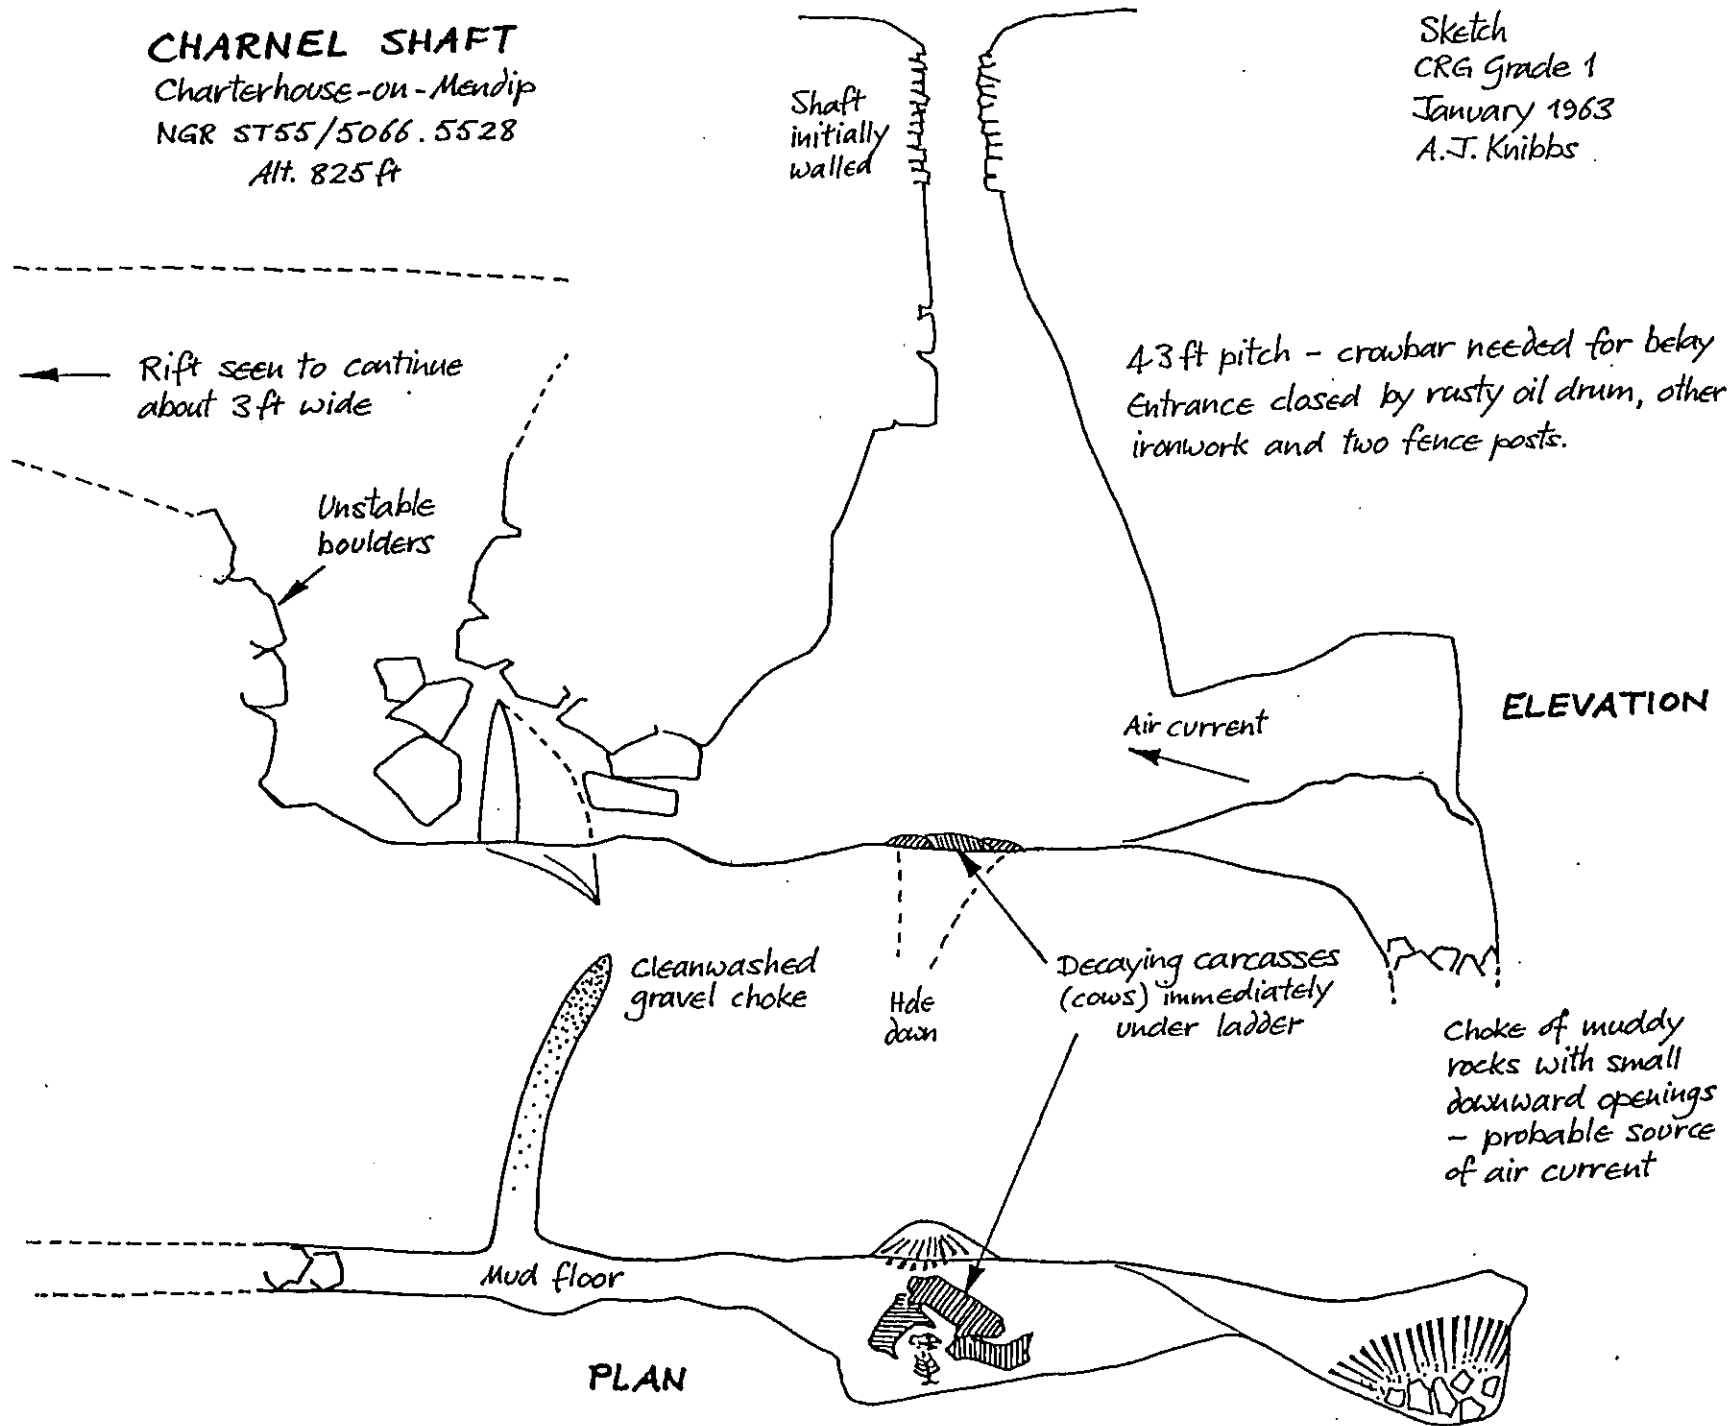

In his turn Geoff descended the shaft and repeated the exploration I had made. We were both rather cold by the time the tackle had been extracted and rolled up, but we closed the hole up again with a rusty section of oil drum, bits of iron and wire, plus two fence posts and a few rocks.

That was sometime in January 1963. There was never a "next time" and it was several years before I set out to locate the entrance again. But it was gone, lost without trace amongst the many gruffy patches dotted about this area. It must be admitted that a covering of snow profoundly changes the surface appearance, and maybe the shallow trench of my memory is misleading and may have been an isolated small circular depression of which there are many in this vicinity.

So it's still there somewhere waiting, perhaps, for another good snowfall through which to make another blowhole. If someone has an hour or two to spare when there is snow on the ground, it would be interesting to go and see if this hole has come out of hiding.

PRIDDY HALL

The caretaker has requested that cavers stop parking outside the entrance doors. Elderly and disabled parties experience difficulty trying to gain access when cars are parked thoughtlessly.

GOATCHURCH CAVERN

Unknown cavers recently held a party in the Boulder Chamber and left behind all their debris: cans, broken bottles, litter, etc. The mess and smell is disgusting. What sort of people do this? If you are planning a trip to Goatchurch perhaps you could take a carrier bag with you and bring some rubbish out, for the sake of conservation and to restore the (normally) caring name of cavers.

Pothole Pourri

FOR SALE

When it was rumoured that Charterhouse Outdoor Education Centre might be put on the market, the MCG committee notified the county council that the Group would like to be kept informed of any developments. At the HYGM the feeling of the members was that the Group was more interested in preserving access to the caves than purchasing the buildings. The Centre has now been put on the market, and offers to buy must be submitted by 12.03.91. The Group will not be making a bid, but if any member is interested in owning a desirable Mendip residence, Malcolm Cotter has further details.

MANY THANKS...

...this time from the East Dorset Speleological Society:

Dear Martin, Please find enclosed a cheque for £66.00 being our hut fees for w/e 8/9th December. We paid a deposit of £12 in May but feel that because we cooked a large Christmas dinner we should make this a contribution to MCG's gas supplies! It remains only for me to say thank you for the loan of the cottage, and to thank Brian and Steve for taking us on very enjoyable caving trips. Merry Christmas to you all,
Debbie Stephens (EDSS Treasurer).

HALF WAY MEET

by Joan Goddard

One cold Tuesday in January a party of cavers from Reading, Oxfordshire, Bristol and Mendip converged on the King's Arms at Mongton Farleigh for an evening trip down Brown's Folly Mine.

After a miniscule crawl through the entrance, the rest of the mine was a civilized walk - eminently suitable for the maturity of many of the party members. The first section of the mine through which we passed was near the valley side and consequently the rock was fairly closely jointed. Some of the fissures, developed possibly in post glacial times, were filled with clay and weathered flints and displayed occasional layers of dark organic material. The flints originated from chalk so how did they get down Brown's Folly Mine?

Throughout the mine but especially in the newer parts there are quite a lot of formations; sometimes the walls are covered with glistening calcite crystals and there are areas where the floor is white flowstone. Pockets of cave pearls occur in the flowstone and I was fascinated to see some of them being kept constantly on the move when drips from the roof fell on them - geology in action! Hidden away elsewhere there are pools with floating calcite crystals and mini gour pools. Although there were no cranes we saw evidence of where they had been, and there were numerous examples of inscriptions made by the miners, old rail track and a compound for keeping the ponies - the 'stables'.

All in all, it was a most enjoyable trip - ably led by Pru and his collie dog!

MCG'S ROCK- DRILL FOUND

Printed opposite is the conclusive proof that our rock drill has been in the hands of a Big Eared Chimpanzee! The drill has since been returned to MCG.

RAMBO THE RAM'S HAD THE CHOP!

A RAM hired to stud 29 ewes did not get any pregnant - because he had been CASTRATED. Rambo was recruited to father a new generation of rare Beulah lambs.

But when nothing happened, a shepherd at the farm in Priddy, Somerset, took a bo-peep - and discovered his secret.

A spokesman said yesterday: "It was an honest mistake. Everyone was flabbergasted Rambo was not up to it."
